LOT 4
LARGE HUARI FIGURAL VESSEL, COASTAL REGION, ATARCO STYLE,
CA. A.D. 500-700
This imposing and distinctive vessel is one of a pair, each showing a bound figure of high rank as seen by the specialized clothing including the four-cornered hat and tie-dyed tunic. The Wari and Tiwanaku were the political powers of Peru from AD 500-1000, with overlapping art styles and iconography. This particular large figural vessel style was known as a coastal Wari type from the Pachacamac region (see Schmidt 1929:pl. 3, and pg. 283); see also Young-Sánchez (2004:158:fig. 6.5) for a vessel in the American Museum of Natural History; see also the suite of figural vessels Peru, Petit Palais (2006: figs. 146-148); see Katz (1983:276, fig. 10) for the mate to this vessel.
